The pitchers here already are: Frank Still, the Kentucky wonder. The only reason he isn't a colonel is that he didn't live in the Blue Grass State long enough. He was city editor of a newspaper there, and left that position of "toll and-trouble," to come to Viryinia- and show ye people here how the batters could be bewildered when peculiar twysts; were put into the sphere. Still is one of the livellest propositions to strike Richmond in some time. He stands six feet, weighs more than one hundred and eighty pounds, and has a right mit from which the horsehide slips with as much gase as the words form when a reporter's pen gets to work on a good hot story.

Whistier, the man, who was the monarch of all he surveys on the Memphis ("cenn.) diamond last year, says that the Still proposition from, Kentucky is all that is waited in the box when a good game is needed/for the losing side. S. C. (Doc) Shetter ceane from the town that boasts of Waddell and Bender and Schreck and Plank, and he is proud of it. The beauty about, this proposition is that he can go into the box and hand them over, or he can play the field as well as the best of them. Litigation lasted for nine months. The champlonship was awarded to Vignaux, who made a grand average of 22.29 in the tournament, whereas Sutton made 29.51 and Cure 19.76.

The emblem having become the property of Vignaux by the court's award, Sutton challenged for it as soon as the Hitgation was over, and the match was played in the Grand Hotel, in Parls, on January 29, 1904. Vignaux won by the scant margin of 500 to 496, and kept the championship. The winner averaged 19.23 and made a high run of 148.

New Emblem.

Since the challenge of Sutten no player has aspired to wrest the emblem from Vignaux. By a clause in the deed of gift, the emblem became the persont property of any player who held it for two years, providing he accepted all challenges. On January 29th last, therefore the emblem passed to Vignaux.

For the coming tournament a new emblem has been offered under conditions similar to the old one. Vignaux, of course, is the present holder of the 182 clampionship. There will, therefore, be two champions, so to speak, after the coming tournament, This is rather an odd situation, and it is to be regretted that Vignaux did not see fit to enter the lists again. The new emblem, like the old will be subject to challenge, and will belong outright to the first player who holds the title for two years. The promoters of the tournament figure that Vignaux by not entering has default of the championship.

History of Title.

The history of the world's championship at 18.2 billiards is not so long as that at the 18.1 game. The latter title was first played for in the concert hall at Madison Square Garden in 1897, and was won by Slosson, who defeated Schaefer, Ives, Daly and Sutton.

The first world's championship at 18.2 was played in the Grand-Hotel, in Paris, on February 15 to 29, 1993. Cure, Sutton, Vignaux and Slosson were the contestants. Play was for the championship emblem and $1,000 in cash, plus the entrance fees and net receipts. Cure, Sutton and Vignaux tied for first place, with two ylctorles and one defeat each. Slosson lost every game he played.

Weeks before play began the four contestants entered into a parole agreement to play off tless as well as divide the net receipts equally. Months before that Cure, Sutton and Vignaux had signed a document, requiring all ties to be determined by the general averages, and specifying as prizes only the emblem, the given money and the entrance fees.

At the conclusion of the final game, Cure vs. Vignaux, it was announced that tless would be played off in the same hall, beginning on February 25th. Vignaux declined to play off, claiming to have won on general average, and carried the case into court.

Litigation lasted for nine months. The
